

We are recruiting a Film Challenge Project Manager for Film Access Scotland

Fantastic new job opportunity to coordinate and deliver a national short film challenge

Posted 23 April 2021

Film Access Scotland is the national sector development body which represents Film Access organisations across Scotland. Our members use film as an expressive tool to unlock the potential of individuals, groups and communities and to bring about positive and lasting social change.

Film Access Scotland has been an informal consortium since 2013, but has recently appointed a Chief Executive and Development Manager to formally establish the organisation as a SCIO, grow the membership and develop and represent the sector. Diversity, inclusion, opportunity, collaboration, creativity and change are values at the heart of all Film Access Scotland members. The current members are GMAC Film (Glasgow), Screen Education Edinburgh (Edinburgh), Station House Media Unit (Aberdeen), Media Education (Edinburgh), and Plantation Productions (Glasgow).

Climate Challenge: 1.5° Films

Film Access Scotland has been appointed by Screen Scotland to design, manager and deliver a significant and high-profile short film challenge to coincide with COP26, requiring a Project Manager to coordinate and manage delivery.

In November 2021, the United Nations Climate Change Conference - COP26 - comes to Scotland. In recognition of nations coming together in Glasgow to work to combat climate change, and an increased public awareness of the climate emergency, Film Access Scotland is launching a national short film challenge, to engage people all over Scotland with this highly important event and the climate crisis.

The Film Challenge Project Manager will coordinate and deliver a national short film challenge. The first component of the project will involve design and delivery of programme of climate literacy and short filmmaking skills training workshops for youth workers, arts organisations, community groups, schools, teachers, educators and other key stakeholder groups. This will kick start the second component, which is a period of filmmaking activity in which we will encourage and support people of all ages across Scotland to tell their stories about the impact climate change has or may have on their lives, communities and local environment through a 90 second film.
